

Unique Kumtap, B.Pharm, MPH, PMP

Transforming Lives through Food Assistance: A Journey Towards Health Justice

The presentation will commence with a narrative on the critical intersection of food, health, and social justice, emphasizing the vital role that food pantries play in bridging these domains. Drawing from my volunteer experiences, I will delve into the day-to-day operations, challenges faced, and personal interactions that have allowed me to witness firsthand the transformative power of food access.

Throughout the discussion, I will shed light on key insights, including the economic, physical, and mental health impact of food insecurity, as well as the positive outcomes that effective food assistance programs can yield. We will explore the symbiotic relationship between agriculture and medicine and the potential of such collaborations in advancing food sovereignty and health justice for all.

Speaker Bio: Unique Kumtap, B.Pharm, MPH, PMP

Unique is a global health development expert with years of hands-on experience in implementation science creating and enabling the connection between research and practice.